DEMONSTRATION ELECTRICAL AT PAMPLIN

Kenneth W. Lane, representing the Virginia Electric and Power Company, will conduct electrical demonstrations at the Pamplin Adult Farmers Class this Thursday night. The demonstrations will be conducted to show the value of good wiring in Preparing for a Farmstead Wiring System. The discussion and demonstration will be conducted by Mr. Lane, and the class regular instructor, W. L. Motley.

Electricity has become a dependable servant to the farmer. With increasing uses in farming and home to plan for this increased usage in the farmstead is of interest. This meeting is open to all farmers.

Spring Flower Show

Plans for the Lynchburg Council of Garden Clubs Spring Flower Show to be held at E. C. Glass High School were made recently at a meeting of the Council at the home of Mrs. J. D. Allen, Jr., president. The show will take place in the high school lobby Saturday, March 29, from 9 until 10 P. M., and Sunday, March 30 from 1 to 7 P. M. This show will be "Awakening of Spring Beauty."

Mrs. T. F. Chaffin and Mrs. John McKee are the General Co-Chairmen of the 1958 Spring Flower Show.

There will be two groups, arrangements and horticulture, consisting of nine sections. Ten awards for all analyses listed in price reports.

for the best exhibits will be made. The entries committee will be at E. C. Glass, March 29 from 8 to 11:30 A. M. No entries will be accepted before or after that time.

Manufactured items such as machinery, equipment, and building supplies will generally be listed at higher prices this year.

Interest rates on bank loans are likely to drop more because of drops in the Federal Reserve discount rates.

SAVINGS BOND SALES FOR FEB.

Sales of E & H Savings Bonds in Appomattox for the month of February amounted to $9078.00, it was announced today.

This brings sales for the year to $17,776.00, or 18% of the 1958 quota of $100,000.

BEGIN WORK ON ROAD CONSTRUCTION

Construction coasting almost $26,000,000 has been started or is under construction on 5 miles of highway and 25 bridges in the interstate road network in Virginia, the State Highway Department has reported.

The Department said this is work that has been started on the system since the federal highway act coming for a national network of controlled-access interstate and defense roads became effective July 1, 1956. The act provided that the federal government would pay 90 per cent of the cost of building the 41,000-mile national highway system and the states would pay 10 per cent.

In addition to those projects, two other jobs costing $2,133,850 also are under construction on interstate routes in Virginia, the Department said, but they are being built in accordance with provisions of a previous act and will not initially have fully controlled-access features.

Most of the contracts awarded for work on the new interstate system are for grading, draining and other early phases of construction. Additional contracts will be necessary to cover connections with existing roads, paving and other work.

The cost of current construction, which totals $25,000,000, does not include rights of way for the multiple-lane, divided highways.

FARM COSTS ARE GOING UP

Prices paid by farmers for commodities and services are still going up.

In their spring-time look at what lies ahead, agricultural economists at VPI note that the index covering living and production goods combined was up one point in January over December and 4 points or 3% from a year earlier.

Price increases for building materials, farm supplies, and fertilizer have more than offset decreases in automobiles, trucks, rubber products, etc.

Net income as per cent of gross income on the farm is as low as any time since 1921. To overcome this effect, farmers are tending to expand gross income to maintain net by using more trees, more cows, others through "vertical expansion" and higher value products.

Virginia farmers are not likely to share fully in the price decrease in feed grains since feed-grain production in Virginia is down materially from last year and acreage increases granted in late August will tend to hold prices up in Virginia compared to the rest of the country.

Virginia farm wage rates are likely to continue up the rest of the year.

Farmers bought most legume and grass seeds at substantially lower prices this fall than last spring or a years earlier. Alfalfa seed production is 5% below last year and 1/5 larger than the 1946-50 average. Most of this years reduction is in Kansas and Oklahoma where the older varieties are produced. Prices of these varieties are likely to be higher than a year ago.

Savings are possible on high analysis fertilizer. Prices for fertilizer in the fall were slightly higher than for both last spring and a year ago. Va. fertilizer prices are about the same or lower

QUESTIONS OF THE WEEK

(Editor's note: Here are the questions asked most frequently by Virginia farmers during the past week, as reported by county agricultural agents. Staff members of the VPI Agricultural Extension Service and/or Experiment Station supply the answers).

Q. Is it too late to seed alfalfa, or lespedeza, clover and orchard grass?

A. It is a little past the recommended seeding date in Tidewater and eastern Virginia; in middle and southern piedmont, seed anytime this month; and in northern piedmont and western Virginia, seed alfalfa up until April 15.

Q. How can I get grass on my lawn?

A. This is a question not easily answered without knowing the individual situation. Generally, old lawns can be renovated by spot seeding, and new lawns can be seeded in the spring, and the sooner now the better. Fall seeding will usually do better. The foundation for a good turf is a good soil. Even the poorest soils can be improved by providing ample drainage, humus, fertilizer and lime.

Q. How can I be sure bulls offered at sales sponsored by breed associations are free of reproductive diseases?

A. You can't be 100% sure, no matter where you buy bulls, unless you have tests run yourself. However, at association - sponsored sales, bulls are not accepted if there is any reason to suspect them of disease. And you can be sure that they are tuberculin tested.

Q. Is it advisable for a swine raiser to put a concrete floor in his feeding pen? I believe three or four sows and keep them on pasture to weaning age, then transfer them to the fattening pen.

A. A concrete floor is a good idea. It makes sanitation much easier.

Q. When should I topdress alfalfa?

A. During the dormant season, or after the first or second cutting. If after the first or second cutting, do it immediately to avoid burning new growth.

Q. My sheep are rubbing against posts and trees. Do they have scabies?

A. Likely they do. Check with your veterinarian for diagnosis and treatment.

Q. What can be done to prevent crimson clover from dying? I think stem rot may be the trouble.

A. Practice crop rotation with non-susceptible crops. There is no recommended chemical treatment for stem rot at present.

IN FASHION NOW

Costume jewelry being shown by leading designers to complement the new dress creations has gone sophisticated and colorful. Literally, it is flashing high, wide and handsome. It is found in the most unexpected places — a pin at the nape of the neck, as a single adornment on a shirt, or leading a double life as a barrette in the hair.

The emphasis on the chemise for spring wear, with its simple, uncluttered lines is the perfect background for a woman to make important use of colorful touches of jewelry.

One of the most important trends in jeweled accessories is the part they play in the new collections. Surprise color combinations will be the order of the day for summer.

Sun colors are big this spring, and are increasingly in earrings, brooches and rings. The range from citrus, shades, mango, orange, pale green, plant emeralds, and pa dabonnet reds.

From where I sit, Hap had good intentions, but he has to understand his daughter's point of view, too. Many of us often make the same mistake. NEWS FOR VETERANS

Although use of modern tuberculosis drugs has developed drug-resistant strains of TB microbes, Veterans Administration studies show no significant increase in new infections from this source, the agency said.

Dr. Martin M. Cummings, director of VA research in Washington, D. C., said modern treatment measures using several drugs in combination, help prevent resistant microbes from developing in drug-treated TB patients.

Hospitalization of TB patients prevents the disease from spreading to others and causing new infections against which the TB drugs may be ineffective, Dr. Cummings said.

To check the extent of drug-resistant TB infection, laboratory screening tests were performed for nearly 2,000 patients admitted to the tuberculosis services of 49 VA hospitals between September 1956 and August 1957, he said.

Among these veterans, all previously untreated for TB, the number of new infections resistant to streptomycin, PAS, or isoniazid was about 3 per cent, Dr. Cummings said.

He said this may be compared with 2.6 per cent of infections found resistant to streptomycin in a study of comparable patients in VA hospitals in 1952.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Lessons Based on the Bible

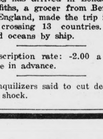
Bible Material: Matthew 21:18-22; Acts 13:1-3; Romans 1:13-3.
Devotional Reading: Acts 8:26-38.

World Wide Church

Lesson for March 23, 1958

THE Bible always means the same thing; but Christians' understanding of what it means changes from age to age. Sometimes the church ignores parts of the Bible and looks the other way, as it were, when their reading brings them to these passages. Sometimes the church may be very fond of a verse or an idea in the Bible, but their notion of what it means may be far off the beam. Sometimes the church in one era understands the Bible rightly—for that era; and Christians in a later time of the world will get another meaning, which is the right one for their era.



Dr. Foreman

Go Into All the World

The Master definitely expected his religion to spread throughout the world. By all accounts, his last orders to his friends were marching orders. Some church members seem to think—indeed, some of them will try to tell you—that each part of the world has its own special local religion and it is bad manners, if not worse, for us Christians to barge in, so to speak, into the territory already staked out for other gods. That, of course, is nonsense. If it were true, then the Pilgrim Fathers had no business bringing their Bibles to the New World. They should have come intending to join whatever religion the Indians might have.

Jesus would have thought it nonsense to expect the faith he founded to stay put in Jerusalem. There was no religious vacuum anywhere in the world then; there is none now. "Into all the world" meant, and still means, that the Christian gospel has to be taken right into competition with existing religions, some of them much older. "Into all the world" means that Christians go out with an article which is already used everywhere, namely religion; but with a brand of religion the like of which, or the equal of which, has never yet been seen.

What Grandma Saw In It

There have been times, very long times, in the history of the Christian church, when this last challenging command of Christ was completely forgotten. Christians had a vague idea that God would win worshippers all over the world, but they had only the foggiest notions how he would do this, and besides, they figured it was God's business anyhow and they needn't bother. But along in the 19th century, the church began to have a different understanding of the Bible, and of their responsibilities as Christians. Jesus' command to "Go, teach" in all the world was taken seriously, and what we know as World Missions or Foreign Missions was re-born.

The nineteenth century was a great Missions century. It saw the founding of the great missionary societies in Europe, Great Britain and America. It saw thousands of young people going out as foreign missionaries. Now in Grandma's time, the way she, as a humble Christian, looked at it was about the way the churches all looked at it. "We who belong to the Christian churches in the Christian countries are in duty bound to send missionaries to the dark and heathen lands of the world. We must send money, too, to build churches and open up hospitals and schools; we must keep on doing this, we and our children, till the whole world has been converted."

A New Day Dawning

What happened? The missionaries succeeded better than Grandma expected. To make a long story short, the Christian church was no longer, as it had been for centuries, a European-American affair. There was an Indian church and an African church and a south Pacific islands church, and so on around the globe. What were these new churches to do? Sit still and live on missionary offerings from far-off America, listen to sermons exclusively from missionaries, be "run" from New York or Edinburgh or Amsterdam? Not for long! The more Christianity succeeded, the more certain it became that these "mission" churches would begin to stand on their own feet.

Selective Service College Exams

The Selective Service College Qualification test will be given to college men May 1, 1958, Captain Thomas W. White, State Director of Selective Service for Virginia, announced today. The May 1 test will be the only test offered for the 1957-58 school year, the State Director said.

Scores made on the test are used by local boards as one guide in considering requests for deferment from military service to continue studies.

Application cards and instructions may be obtained from Selective Service local boards, after Monday, March 10. Men planning to take the test were urged by Captain White to make early application at the nearest local board office for fuller information and necessary forms and materials.

The State Director pointed out that student deferments which test scores have helped determine since 1951, have been a major factor in insuring the nation its present supply of specialized manpower. Many students deferred since the testing program was begun are today scientists, engineers and specialists in other technical fields and in the social sciences, teaching and humanities.

In previous yeare, two regular and one make-up test customarily have been given. But with fewer men applying to take the test, it was announced last summer that only one test would be offered this school year.

Applications must be postmarked not later than midnight, Friday, April 11, 1958.
